

2002
2002 2002

Steven Duval,
La Mela è un Modello,
Biella 2002
© Cittadellarte

La Mela è un Modello

For my project La Mela è un Modello, I undertook research about produce, in particular apples, in the Piemonte region. The loss of diversity in commercial plants like apples is becoming a real issue which is severely affecting agrarian culture. For this reason, I decided to go to a biodiversity centre in Bibiana, a small town in the region, to buy a few kilos of apples. I ended up with eight different types of apple indigenous to the area and gave them away at the local produce market. To accompany this intervention, I also created a booklet with information regarding biodiversity and the industry of apples. The work was also presented later at UNIDEE.

Steven Duval